Dr. Eddy Clifford Jerman

President Emeritus, ASXT

November 21, 1865 – September 13, 1936

Dr. Jerman is recognized as “The Father of Radiography” in the United States because of his early teaching of radiography beginning in 1897 and the founding of the American Association of Radiological Technicians now known as the ASRT.

In 1928 Dr. Jerman published “Modern X-Ray Technic” in which he said, “The technician who does his work by the “hunch” method can never successfully compete with one who having mastered the fundamentals is enabled to develop a proper procedure and put into the film any quality that may be desired.”

After the death of Dr. Jerman in 1936 his name was placed among the martyrs of the Roentgen Rays.

“The honorary category of Fellow is bestowed upon members who have made outstanding contributions to the profession and to the American Society of Radiologic Technologist. This category was initiated within the ASRT to honor members who were dedicated to the organization and contributed unselfishly to the profession. Each Fellow has committed to the advancement of the profession of the district, state, regional, national and/or international levels.”

CHAPTER 4

COUNSELORS OF THE AMERICAN SOCIETY OF X-RAY TECHNICIAN FROM THE NORTH CAROLINA SOCIETY OF X-RAY TECHNICIANS

1944 - 1986

INTRODUCTION

“The President, with the approval of the Executive Committee, shall in harmony with the Constitution and By-laws for Affiliated Societies, appoint Counselors to serve in the area where they reside. It shall be the duties of the Counselors to encourage and assist in fostering such movements as will be of general interest and benefit to x-ray technicians.

They shall, in cooperation with the Affiliation Committee, act as official representatives of the Society in advising and assisting x-ray technicians and organizations within their districts. They shall cooperate with the American Registry of X-Ray Technicians. Their appointments shall be sine die, and may be terminated at the discretion of the President.”

 Source: M. Honig, RT, ASXT Historian. History of the ASXT. Vol. 2 1951 – 1960. The Bruce Publishing Co 1961

“1946 At the June meeting (of the ARXT) the Board passed a resolution to amend the Bylaws to require that applications for examination to be signed by the applicant’s employer, the radiological supervisor, and by the counselor appointed by the ASXT in the state from which the application originated. Previously, applications had to be signed by four references: employer (medical supervisor), radiologist in charge of the department and two other radiologists”. (Terms were for one year starting in the spring.)

In 1966 the Registry would not accept any application for examination unless the applicant had completed a 24 month course approved by the AMA. A new application was introduced providing space for both the supervising technologist and radiologist director to certify to the applicant’s completion of the accredited program. The applicant no longer had to provide proof of a high school graduation or the program director to complete a reference form.

Source: Jack W. Hanson, The History of The American Registry of Radiologic Technologists. Hollbrook & Associates 1996.

It was the duty of the Counselor to complete the reference form to put with the application for the ARRT. I believe it was then that the position of Counselor was phased out. From this point forward Counselors were probably redirected to assist in Continuing Education.

“The death of Jean I. Widger has left a great emptiness in the Radiologic Technology profession. For twenty-five years, Ms. Widger, a woman of warmth and wit, intelligence and integrity, dedicated herself to the growth of our profession, and as editor of our professional journal, provided an inspiration with her cogent and comprehensive editorials.

The silent majority often called her their best friend, the person who listened, understood, spoke for, laughed with, loved life with, and stood for them. A true lady was she. One who added warm class to every situation in which she participated.

We shall miss her but her legacy of professional excellence will live forever as a lasting tribute to this beloved woman.”
